Hi Sarah,

Any update with this Gizmodo website that is using incorrect addresses in our neighborhood to see the Hollywood Sign? I was so impressed with how quickly you got those other two similar websites fixed.

Thank you,
Heather

Thank you Sarah! Wow, that was fast!

While you are at it, the Gizmodo website below lists the following addresses for Hollywood sign access, and needs to be edited or taken down:

6084 Mulholland Hwy: this is the dirt foot-path section of dirt Mulholland. One end is gated and the other is our little dead end street that has no parking (which is why we were left out of PPD district #195).

6161 Mulholland Hwy: This is my neighbor's HOUSE. Their home is next to another dirt foot-path further down Mulholland, on the way to the "vista."

3204 Canyon Lake Drive: The vista, which we all know is not legal and needs to be shut down. We cannot afford to have any more attention drawn to this monstrosity.

If you read her blog/website, it is very clear that the author has no regard for the personal safety of the residents or of the visitors she is referring here.

hi i am writing this to you to apologize of what has happened. The website is down and as you can see this is a free make your own website company known as weebly meaning that anyone can create a website. Also weebly said if you search for this it would not pop up on all search engines unless you have the exact website name. Now, my friends and i are just kids. First of all, we did not touch the sign. Second this was not meant for anyone to see and was meant for to be a prank on my friends that we have a hiking program. If you not know already, kids can't own bussinesses. Also if i were to charge anyone it was not going to be public but only for my friends so i can provide them for food and water. Also that address was just a need up point for me and my friend so then later we can hike the legal way to the sign like every normal person does. Now i have wrote this to apologize and i under stand and realize it was stupid. The website is now down and this website was not meant to be public. we hope you can forgive us.
